Love's Language.

Darling, princess, angel, dear, Sweetheart, rosebud, goddess, dove: Poor old words, all worn threadbare In the service of young Love.

Soiled and old, and sadly frayed, Why not fling them all aside, Never more to thrill a maid, Never more to kindle pride?

Ay, why not pull down the sun, Saying it is worn and old. Saying that its use is done, Saying it is pale and cold?

Phough its/cruel beams may slay, Still we gladly hall its glow; It is new to each new day, Though 'twas ancient long ago.

And to Her the words are sweet
And unsolled by use and new;
Phough a thousand times they cheat,
She can still believe them true.

WIND AND SEA.

No. 631.

By BAYARD TAYLOR.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

HE Sea is a jovial comrade, He laughs wherever he goes

His merriment shines in the dimpling lines That wrinkle his hale repose; He lays himself down at the feet of the Sun,

And shakes all over with glee, And the broad-backed billows fall faint on the shore, In the mirth of the mighty Sea! But the Wind is sad and restless

And cursed with an inward pain; You may hark as you will, by valley or hill, But you hear him still complain. He wails on the barren mountains, And shrieks on the wintry sea;

And shudders all over the aspen tree Welcome are both their voices,
And I know not which is best—
The laughter that slips from the Ocean's lips,

He sobs in the cedar, and moans in the pine.

Or the comfortless Wind's unrest. There's a pang in all rejoicing, A joy in the heart of pain. And the Wind that saddens, the Sea that gladdens,
